U.S. Ambassador To Russia Confirms Atrocities

The many reports that have come out of Russia concerning widespread German atrocities in the country were supported by W. Averell Harriman, American Ambassador to the Soviet Union, who is in Washington, reporting on the recent Moscow conversations among ranking British, Russian and Polish officials.

"The character of the German atrocities on the eastern front has not been and cannot be exaggerated," he told newspaper correspondents at the State Department.

Emphasizing that his comment referred to the character of the atrocities, he added: "Its ruthlessness and the efficiency of it were utterly unbelievable."

Ambassador Harriman said Russia was anxious for the friendship of the United States and that the Russians were going to work with the States in the defeated countries.

Because of the German stand-fast on the eastern front, Mr. Harriman said, the Russians are tremendously interested in what is to be done with war criminals.

The atrocities in the east, he explained, were entirely different from those committed by the Germans in western Europe. While the shooting of hostages in the west was shocking, he pointed out, these incidents were relatively few when the killing of large numbers of people, especially Jews, in the east.

Daily Attacks Hebrew Committee Head

Peter H. Bergson's Hebrew Committee of National Liberation has collected one million dollars in contributions from American people, according to his own admission, but Mr. Bergson is "vague" in his account of what was the million dollars has been put to, the Washington Post declares in a series of articles by Gloria Lubar and Edward F. van der Veen. "Relief work has been a small part of our work," the Post quotes Bergson as saying. "Our major activity is to mobilize the understanding and help of American people for a . . . solution of the problems of the Jewish people in Europe."

The Washington Post quotes from a statement issued by the American Jewish Conference last December, referring to an appeal for contributions by the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation to rescue the Jews of Rumania. The statement read in part: "The public might be interested in knowing just how much has been collected and what disposition was made of the money."

At a press conference in Washington Mr. Bergson charged that the Post story was a deliberate misrepresentation to present him in the worst possible light. He admitted, however, the Post says, "that the Hebrew Committee of National Liberation is not American; has no right to collect funds; is taking no action toward [illegible] relief to 'Hebrews'; and does not, to their knowledge, represent either European or Palestinian 'Hebrews.'" The Post further states that Bergson insisted that part of the Hebrew National Liberation Fund, Inc., was [illegible]

J.D.C. To Send $500,000 In Supplies To Poland

The first material aid going directly into liberated areas of Poland for assistance to surviving Jews will be sent immediately by the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee in the form of fifty tons of food and clothing which has been ordered and is being shipped from Teheran to the Jewish Relief Committee in Lublin for distribution. In addition to these supplies, which are being transferred from J.D.C. stockpiles in Teheran and are valued at $250,000, the J.D.C. has appropriated another $250,000 for the purchase in the United States and elsewhere of additional commodities.

The action of the J.D.C. follows an exchange of cables with Dr. Emil Sonnerstein, for many years prior to the war a co-worker with the J.D.C. and climaxes the efforts of the J.D.C. to return to a major scene of its relief activities prior to the outbreak of World War II.

"The Jews of Poland have been special targets of Nazi brutality," Joseph C. Hyman, Executive Vice-Chairman of the J.D.C., explained in announcing the emergency action. "The need for the materials we are sending to Poland has been a longstanding one. Starvation, disease and inconceivable privations have been the lot of Polish Jewry during the last five years. The food and clothing will be of immediate value to the comparatively small number of Jews remaining," he continued. It is our earnest hope that further shipments of food, clothing and medicaments can be made in the immediate future."

CATHOLICS, JEWS, NEGROES BERATED

Two women charged with railing against Catholics, Negroes and Jews and with striking a man who protested at Broadway and Forty-second Street, New York, were fined $10 each on charges of disorderly conduct by Magistrate J. Diserio in Jefferson Market Court. The women, who said they were photographers employed in taverns, were Mrs. Mary McGuinness, twenty-one years old, of 30 West Twentieth Street, and Mrs. Mary Stoberg, twenty-six, of 215 West Thirty-fourth Street.

They were arrested on the complaint of David Lange, of 106 West Eighty-seventh Street who said that the women seized and struck him when he said he was going to have them arrested. Another witness in court was Mrs. Albert Hertzberg, of 570 West Seventy-fifth Street, who said that Mrs. Stoberg asked her for whom she intended to vote and when Mrs. Hertzberg refused to say, shouted, "I'm going to vote for Dewey because he'll bring a lot of Hitlers to America."

Belgian Jews, Enduring Martyrdom, Snatched Lives From Nazis, Kept Lists Of Deportees

Five hundred and seventy-seven Jews interned at the Dossin Barracks at Malines in Belgium were due to be deported on Sunday, September 3. But 16 hours before they were timed to leave, and while the Dalobbe Barracks were still occupied by S.S., a contingent of the Comité de Défense des Juifs (Jewish Defence Committee) carried out a daring rescue of the prisoners, among whom were Rabbi Dr. Ullman, Grand Rabbin of Belgium, and his family; and the caricaturist Jacques Ochs and his sister Hedwig, from whom the Gestapo in Liege had stolen a valuable collection of works of art and also a valuable library. Another prisoner rescued was Mlle. Salsberger, the well-known historian.

The story of this exploit was told to a representative of the Brussels newspaper, La Dernière Heure, by M. Charles Perelman, of the Free University of Brussels, and President of the Comité de Défense des Juifs at the Foyer Israélite, 31, Rue de Caserne, Brussels. These premises had been converted by the Nazis into

Hitler Policy

The ruthlessness and artificiality of Hitler's anti-Jewish policy stood out conspicuously when Harold Denny, of the New York Times, talked with the inhabitants of Aachen who remained behind when the Nazi authorities ordered it evacuated on the eve of our invasion. Successive purges have left scarcely a dozen of Aachen's one-time Jewish population of 3,000 to 5,000. And these survivors are now being accepted by their "Aryan" neighbors on the same friendly terms that prevailed between Jews and non-Jews in Aachen before Hitler made the Jews the scapegoats.

This dozen are not segregated, but are distributed among the 5,000 Aacheners in a refugee camp near the city. Until the Americans came in they were hiding in Aachen cellars.

The experience of one of them is fairly typical. It is better not to use his name because his wife was taken by the Germans and might still be alive. But before Hitler he was a prosperous business man in Cologne — one of that city's 20,000 Jews who lived there amicably with non-Jews. He held positions of honor in the community. He is now more than 60 years old.

Step by step he was stripped of his business and his home after Hitler came in and eventually was forced with his wife into hiding in the terrible purge of November, 1938. In 1942, disasters for him increased. He and his wife tried to flee separately to circumvent a deportation order to Russia in 1942, but, though he reached their rendezvous, his wife disappeared. He went then to Aachen.

He had managed to conceal 7,000 marks and on this he lived in the home of a friendly non-Jewish family in Aachen for the next two years. He hardly ever left their apartment. He had no food cards nor other documents but this family bought him food on the black market.

In 1942 all Jews were ordered out of the Cologne district, including Aachen, except those married to "Aryans." There were about a dozen such in Aachen but this ruined business man never saw them. They all lived incognito only to avoid the Gestapo. About 200 such Jews remained in Cologne.

Sept. 2 this year Nazi authorities ordered this whole part of Germany evacuated. In Aachen this dozen Jews were among the 2,000 Aacheners who preferred death in battle to an unknown fate in Germany.

The "Aryan" family with whom this business man lived departed, however. The business man stayed behind, hiding in the apartment. He heard bombing and shelling and the sound of U.S. troops fighting their way toward the center of the city with mixed feelings.

On Oct. 17 the battle reached his street. There was a pounding on his door. He feared to open it lest it be the Germans. Then the door was broken down and in burst an American soldier. The business man embraced him.

"I was so happy to see your men," he said. "I have nothing left in the world, nothing except these ragged clothes I have on but I am happy."

One elderly Christian woman sat near us as he told his story in the office of the refugee camp.

"We want to help the Jews now that we can," she said. "We could not do much before. The people who showed them sympathy were arrested. The people of Aachen were always good to the Jews."

She added naively: "There were only wealthy Jews here and they spent much money."

Hope Dwindles For Jews In Hungary

The Nation says:

If any Jews are to be found alive in Hungary, the attacking Red Army will have to move fast. Only last week the Szalasi government announced a purge of anti-Nazi elements and Jews. Where Horthy was at least willing to bargain with the Allies, in the hope of saving his skin if not his power, Szalasi is wholly Hitler's man. The Jews can no longer be rescued except by armed action; thus the last surviving considerable number left in Central Europe will probably be lost.

The horror of this fact can only increase the bitterness with which humane people everywhere regard Great Britain's continued refusal to admit refugees to Palestine. It is reported that even the handful of Palestine visas still available under the terms of the White Paper are being withheld in order to put off the day when they will be exhausted and Jews will renew their demand for abrogation of the restrictions.

Against this background the President's recent message to the meeting of the Zionist Organization in Atlantic City was an immense encouragement. Mr. Roosevelt specifically indorsed the plank in the Democratic platform supporting "unrestricted Jewish immigration and colonization" in Palestine and the establishment there of a "free and democratic Jewish Commonwealth." And he promised to try to find "appropriate ways and means of effectuating this policy as soon as possible." At about the same time Mr. Stimson said that the War Department had withdrawn its ban on the Jewish Commonwealth resolution, held up in Congress last spring at the request of General Marshall.

None of this activity will save Jewish lives in Hitler's Europe: it comes too late for that. But if the ban on immigration into Palestine is removed, the plight—mental and material—of surviving Jews after the war will be greatly eased.

Catholic And Protestant Chaplains Join In Service By U. S. Jewish Troops Near Aachen

[illegible] Jewish GI's near Aachen held the first Jewish religious services to be broadcast from Nazi soil to the United States in a dramatic program presented by the American Jewish Committee over the coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Company. The ceremonies, held in the open air in a sector of the American First Army's front, emphasized the ideological struggle against Hitlerism by the participation of Catholic and Protestant chaplains in what was probably the first inter-faith demonstration held on German soil since the Nazis came to power.

The program was short-waved from a spot near the scene where the Nazis, six years ago, destroyed the only synagogue in Aachen during the pogroms which swept Germany following the assassination of Ernst von Rath in Paris by a Polish Jewish youngster, Herschel Grynszpan.

Conducting the services was Chaplain Sidney M. Lefkowitz, formerly rabbi of Congregation Beth-Hahesrah in Richmond, Virginia. Catholic Chaplain Edward J. Waters, of Rochester, N.Y., and Protestant Chaplain Bernard F. Henry, of Chambersburg, Pa., spoke.

As Chaplain Lefkowitz led the Jewish soldiers in the chant, "Ein Kelohaynu," German artillery fire could be heard distinctly over the air. James Cassidy, NBC war correspondent who arranged the broadcast, later said in a trans-Atlantic telephone call to New York, that the program was almost called off because of the disconcerting proximity of Nazi shells.

"We observe here not merely a religious service," Chaplain Lefkowitz declared, "it is far more than that. It is a proclamation that the days of darkness are passing, that the nations from [illegible] have been destroyed and even will be destroyed, that worship of God is again restored in this part of the world."

He pointed out that the service was not the first to be held in Germany, "but it is the first which we broadcast to the world. With the prophet we say, 'How sweet upon the mountain are the feet of the messenger of good tidings.'"

Declaring the light of religious freedom had pierced through the darkness of Nazi persecution and that freedom of conscience again exists in the land that had been denying it to men, Chaplain Lefkowitz asserted that "eternal truth has lived through and will outlive the fanatical power which sought to destroy it. "Even as we sadly look upon the ruins surrounding us and consider the loss of lives with which this victory has been purchased, we are solaced by the thought of the lasting memorial which consecrates the sacrifice and upon which is written in letters that glow like burning coals, 'the spirit of man cannot be conquered.'"

Catholic Chaplain Waters paid tribute to Jewish heroism and martyrdom and lauded the many Christians who gave shelter and protection, at the risk of their own lives, to Jews hounded by the Gestapo. He told of a Belgian priest who had sheltered a rabbi in his home for four full years. He added, "One of the good products born of this war is religious freedom for all men."

Protestant Chaplain Henry pointed out that "actually it is not so strange that a service such as this is being held on German soil. Nazism was never really able to crush the heart of man and remove his love for God. The torture and death imposed upon the Jews of Germany and the enslaved of Europe have failed miserably in their real purpose."

Chaplain Henry said that "many services and holiday celebrations have been conducted for American soldiers since we entered Germany. As conditions permit, I am confident that the Jews everywhere in Europe shall soon again have the opportunity to enter freely into their houses of worship. That is definitely one of the things we are fighting for and one of the things we are resolved to preserve."

The offices of the American Jewish Committee and National Broadcasting Company were deluged with telephone calls and letters from Jews and non-Jews, many of them kin of American soldiers overseas who said they were "thrilled" and "inspired" by the broadcast.

"Sometimes when people announce that
I tell them, without reason
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an easier."

In view of troubled conditions in Palestine where the Jews feel an increasing anxiety over rumors of a possible partition of their settlement, and where their leaders have just been induced to plan action against Jewish terrorists because of the Government threat to include all Jews under the stigma which attaches to the gangsters unless these are brought under control, it is of interest to note what Emanuel Shinwell, British Member of Parliament, had to say about the question of Palestine and the future of Zionism some months ago in an interview with the Jewish Chronicle of London, England.

Mr. Shinwell, as you know, is a Laborite, a thinker of considerable penetration, and a man who is well on his way to the highest political office. You may remember, too, that once his answer to an anti-Semitic gibe in the House of Commons was to walk across the floor and slap the face of the man who made it.

Mr. Shinwell believes that Britain will keep the Palestine question simmering in a state of non-solution until the India question is settled, and will continue to follow a policy of divide and rule between the Arabs and the Jews. British political thinking on the subject is imbued with the idea, rightly or wrongly, that the Moslems must be appeased everywhere in the Middle East in order to keep the British hand strong in India because of Moslem opinion there. Mr. Shinwell did not say how long he thinks it will be before the India question, which hinges on the end of direct British rule, will be so well settled that the opinions of the Arab politicians in Palestine will not amount to anything. But he does think that the time will come. Meanwhile, he says that no British Government will ever allow the Arabs to push the Jews into the sea.

One reason for this optimism as to some security for the Jews of Palestine lies in the fact that they have made themselves a British asset. Mr. Shinwell calls Palestine a godsend to the British in this war because of the marvellous wonders wrought there in achievements and developments of enormous help to the Allied cause, to such an extent that had it not been for this Jewish undertaking, a German victory in that area would have been almost certain when Rommel stood at the gates of Alexandria.

He emphasizes that the Zionists should concentrate on materialistic success in Palestine, and on making their settlement an asset to Britain if they want to receive consideration, because then their undertaking cannot be neglected. His advice to them is to make Palestine rich and prosperous and to direct their energies to enterprise and increasing the wealth of the country.

Mr. Shinwell thinks that the Zionists are misguided in stressing their rights to a National Home under the Balfour Declaration. British Governments, he says, do not consider themselves morally bound by pledges when times and circumstances have changed. Moreover, he believes that no one has a moral right to hold a government to a pledge merely because the government made that pledge. Pledges and treaties, he says, are kept operative when all the parties concerned want them to be, or operative those who do wish them to go on can enforce their wish. [illegible] Zionists [illegible] in idealism. They are interested in practical successes and in running a huge undertaking with the avoidance of trouble. To Britain, Jews as Jews are a tedious and tiresome problem and it has absolutely no interest in the future of Jewry.

Zionists are urged to keep their sense of proportion and perspective and to realise that Palestine is just a fragment of a vast Imperial problem. Mr. Shinwell says Zionists and Jews in general should never forget how relatively small the Jewish question is in the world among the great problems which will have to be solved after the war. Moreover, he tells them that they should cease to confuse the courtesies of public political speech with solemn expressions of political intentions, and then they would save themselves much heart-break and the agonising sense of having been deceived.

It is seldom that one man can apply so many strokes of common sense to one much-discussed question as Mr. Shinwell has done with regard to Palestine. Of course, common sense itself is rare and so is a man with the ability, courage, and honesty of this Jewish Member of Parliament. Mr. Shinwell is a realist. He is cool and detached and his thinking is not messed up in a turmoil of emotion. He does not say what people expect him to say or want to hear him say, but what he really believes. He does not wave the flag or entrance his hearers with the fanciful reminiscences of the day-dreamer and visionary.

Mr. Shinwell is a refreshing change from the propagandist in the provinces who specialises in hot air and wishful thinking. His views are important because of their source and should help to crystallize opinion on a matter of interest to all Jews. f.f.c.

War Veterans To Have Five Palestine Settlements

Ten new Jewish settlements, the largest number ever to be launched at one time, were started in Palestine, half of them to absorb demobilized Jewish soldiers who have served with the British Army since 1939, according to an announcement made by Dr. James G. Heller, National Chairman of the United Palestine Appeal, through the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine.

With these ten colonies under way, there are now 800 Jewish settlements in Palestine.

The funds for colonization are provided by the Palestine Foundation Fund and the land on which they are established is made available by the Jewish National Fund. These two agencies constitute the United Palestine Appeal in the U.S. which, together with the Joint Distribution Committee and the National Refugee Service, receives its funds through the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine.

During the next three months the Jewish Agency for Palestine will spend $2,250,000 on this colonization program, on the basis of a cable received from Eliezer Kaplan, Treasurer of the Jewish Agency in Jerusalem.

Mrs. Raymond Clapper, widow of the war correspondent and now a member of the Washington Emergency Committee to Save the Jewish People of Europe, a Burgess committee, declared, regarding to the Washington Post: "In the future I will not serve on Peter Bergson's committees. . . . I was amazed to find out that the money was used to propagandize the American public."

Third president gaffes said they plan to call Mr. Bergson to court to explain why he is operating a business from his embassy, in a residential area of Washington, without an occupancy permit, the Post reports.

a lecture-theatre for the Deutsche Akademie.

The Comité de Défense des Juifs was a secret organization affiliated to the underground "Independence Front."

M. Perelman also gave some other encouraging information. Thanks to the help of Jewish members of the staff, he said, lists of those Jews who had been deported to the East had been preserved.

The Jews are particularly indebted to Canon Leclef, Secretary to Cardinal van Roye, to the Franciscan Sisters of the High School in Malines and to the St. Elisabeth Sanatorium, who helped them in their dire distress, M. Perelman added.

With a budget of some five million francs per months, the C.D.J. had been able to help 2,500 children and 10,000 adults in hiding. Out of the 90,000 Jews estimated to have been in Belgium when the Nazis invaded it, said M. Perelman, only 42,000 had registered at the Jewish Registry, and of these, 25,000 to 30,000 had been deported.

The C.D.J. was very proud of its numerous exploits, in the course of which victims of the German deportation plans were rescued, and especially of those in April, 1943, when several hundred Jews were saved from being sent to the death camps.

According to the newspaper report, the Brussels Synagogue had suffered very slight damage.

M—— K——, a Belgian Jew serving as a private in the Belgian Forces with the British Army of Liberation, sent a letter to a friend in London describing his experiences, which appeared in the London Jewish Chronicle as follows:

"You will have read in the newspapers of the 450-mile race from Normandy to Belgium," he writes. "We took part in this chase, and for three days scarcely slept or ate properly.

"There are no words adequate to describe our reception in Belgium; and particularly in Brussels. It began at the frontier, in the very first town we entered.

"About an hour's journey from Brussels I came across the first people I knew, a young Jewish couple from Antwerp, who had been living in hiding in the village for two years, and had just come out for the first time.

"I shall never forget our entry into Brussels: we were literally mobbed. The people jumped on to our lorries, or they rode, running beside us, [illegible] our people and lasses as souvenirs and generally went completely mad.

"While we were driving through the city—it was then about 5 p.m.—and I was wondering how I could manage to get to Antwerp that evening to try and see my father, I suddenly heard my name being called. I looked around and saw an Antwerp girl who was shouting out that my father was in Brussels. What a remarkable coincidence! A real one-in-a-million chance! She ran alongside my lorry for a hundred yards, shouting out my father's address.

"It was almost 8 p.m. before I was free, but I rushed to the hospital where my father had been for the past few weeks. I told one of the male nurses who I was, and asked him to prepare my father for this unexpected visit.

"You can imagine my feelings when my arms were around him. I felt as if I were the father and he the child I had found again.

"He told me what had befallen him, and I shall tell it to you very briefly. Exactly two years ago, on September 11, 1942, the Huns came to our apartment to arrest my parents. At the time my father was seriously ill and tied to his bed. Without even trying to ring the bell, the Jerries kicked the door in and wanted to take away both my father and my mother. The shock gave my father a severe heart attack, so they left him behind. My mother was taken away. She was wearing a flimsy summer frock and was not allowed to take anything with her.

"That was the last my father saw or heard of her. Next day, the Jerries came back again to arrest my father, but as he was still in a very precarious condition, they took him to a hospital, where he remained for 22 months.

"From there, he was sent to the notorious camp near Malines, and again because of his extreme weakness, narrowly escaped deportation. A few weeks ago he was sent to the hospital in Brussels where I found him, together with about 180 more Jewish people.

"My father said that this time they were all to be deported. The sudden entry of the Allies into Brussels saved at least 1,000 Jews from doom.

"I cannot go into further details now. One day you will come to Belgium, and learn all about the sufferings of our people. I would need to be another Jeremiah to be able to describe their martyrdom.

"I lie awake at night wondering what we could possibly do to the Germans to repay them for what they have done to us, but I cannot think of any adequate punishment.

"Many people think that Lord Vansittart is unduly severe. Would to God we had forty million Vansittarts in England; maybe Europe would then be a better place to live in.

"I went to see Leon's cousins who told me they had all been taken away in the middle of the night, just a year ago, when the big round-up of Belgian Jews took place. The Huns took everything they had to the last spoon. They even took the coal out of the cellar.

"Whether there is still a chance of finding any of our people alive is an open question. It seems that many of the younger ones were put to work, and thus may have escaped death. I have never had any illusions and I shall consider anybody who comes back as one risen from the dead."

In an earlier letter from Belgium, Pte. K—— had written: "Even to try and tell you the things I have heard about I cannot back is impossible. There is a limit to the horror the human mind can grasp, and this is too much. It seems unbelievable that any of our people should have survived what they went through.

"Lots of them saved their lives by staying in hiding for two or even three years, often in appalling conditions, which have been responsible for saving the lives of many Jews.

"I was in Antwerp yesterday, and for all practical purposes that town is Judenrein. Out of a once prosperous community of 70,000 Jews, nothing is left. Some lucky ones went abroad, a few managed to stay in Belgium, and the rest have disappeared, only Heaven knows where, and to what ghastly doom.

"One day peace will come, and then all the martyred peoples of Europe will send delegates to the Peace Conference to ask for restitution from Germany. But who will be there to speak for all Jews who will demand revenge for the unspeakable sufferings of that hapless people? I fear there will be nobody, and even those we shall be left to weep by the waters of Babylon."

U. S. Urged To Prepare For Return Of Nazi Loot To Jews

A program to bring about just, speedy restitution to Jews in the occupied countries whose property was seized or destroyed by the Germans was urged upon the State Department by the American Jewish Committee. In a letter to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Dr. John Slawson, executive vice-president of the American Jewish Committee, proposed that, "as occupation of enemy territory proceeds, the Allied High Command be instructed to order the seizure of the records and property of institutions set up by the Germans to liquidate Jewish property, together with the freezing of their assets, the detention and examination of their officers and the inspection of their records."

Pointing out that "the Nazi outrages against Jews have been so enormous" that their mass looting of Jewish property and possessions has not received the same prominent attention, Dr. Slawson declared that "justice and expediency alike require" that this damage to innocent persons be made good.

"We are confident that the several United Nations will protect the interests of their own citizens and that the United Nations as a whole will continue their excellent precedents of distinguishing between ex-enemy and stateless persons, who have suffered much at the hands of Germany, and ex-enemy aliens properly so-called," Dr. Slawson continued.

With regard to compensation and restitution for property owned by Jews in Germany and Austria, Dr. Slawson said that that can be settled "only when the United Nations have passed on the entire problem of German responsibility. Until that time, however, we suggest the advisability of taking steps now to prevent any prejudice to claims by Jews when they are considered."

For the present, Dr. Slawson said, "an effective step would be to instruct the Allied High Command to order, as occupation of enemy territory proceeds, the seizure of the records and property of institutions set up by the Germans to liquidate Jewish property, together with the freezing of their assets, the detention and examination of their officers and the inspection of their records. We believe that in this way [illegible] can ultimately be [illegible] that Jewish property [illegible] will be restituted."
